

FIRST ANNOUNCEMENT

Dear Colleague,

The International Society for the Study of Medieval Theology (Internationale Gesellschaft für Theologische Mediävistik – IGTM), the Institute of Philosophy of the University of Warsaw, and the Institute of Philosophy of the University of Silesia in Katowice have the pleasure of inviting you to the international conference

Altiora te ne quaesieris (Sir. 3, 22): THE MEDIEVAL PURSUIT OF WISDOM

SUBJECT

The conference aims at discussing various aspects of the medieval search for intellectual and moral perfection. It is open to philosophical and theological considerations related to the concept of wisdom intended in a broad sense, both in its theoretical and practical dimensions. Among the many possible interpretative paths, there are such issues as:

- the cognitive optimism vs the ethical and epistemic limitations of knowledge,
- the problem of the latent medieval scepticism and of various approaches to the problem of knowability, which is related to the variety of definitions of the scope of the unknown.
- the basic motivations of medieval intellectuals, their aims and scientific ambitions,
- the tension between the condemnation of ignorance, the prohibition of curiosity, and the natural desire for knowledge.
- the impact of Aristotle's theory of science on the medieval views on intellectual research.

Furthermore, from a philosophical perspective, wisdom can be considered a matter of inherently and typically human activity; but, when viewed from a theological point of view, scientia and sapientia are gifts beyond the natural human powers. The pursuit of wisdom in the Middle Ages is a provocative issue, open to many other considerations, and it encourages an interdisciplinary debate.
